

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this letter as a personal recommendation for Deborah Arrington, a former colleague and friend for many years.

Until recently, Deborah has been copy-writing for the investment newsletter, Asian Growth Stocks, of which I am the editor.

I have had both the pleasure and honor of working closely with Deborah for the better part of a decade, and it is during this time that I saw my newsletter grow rather significantly under her work and guidance.

Deborah is constantly bursting with bright ideas aimed at increasing readership and revenues for my newsletter. And she's able to translate these ideas into words in the most effective manner, which resulted in tens of thousands of dollars in generated revenues at a time.

One thing that I've always liked about Deborah is that she would seldom let the pressure of work get to her. Always full of energy and enthusiasm, she could find the humor in a tense and difficult situation, and that would usually flow over to those working around her.

Considering the unpredictable work schedule that comes with the business, she always sees her projects through. A great work ethic, indeed!

On a more personal level, Deborah is by far one of the most honest and principled persons I've ever met. She earned my trust very quickly, and has never given me any reason to question that trust, her work, as well as her dedication to the job.

She's a terrific mom -- always proud of the achievements of her daughter, and makes sure she shares those moments with people around her. It no surprise that she treats her work with a similar degree of love, respect, and proudness.

I highly recommend Deborah for employment with any company looking for hard-working, intelligent, and honest people.

Sincerely,

Brian Tycangco, Editor
